

Chess Game

“How about a 'nice' game of chess”?

Chess is not a 'nice' game, as it is one of straight up military strategies.

To understand 'Chess' start with the board game and its rules. This will give the basis for all strategies employed in the real game I am about to describe.

There are two board games, one is a past time usually found in casual contests, while the other employs the rules of international chess and offers true challenges.

After becoming familiar with casual chess, study the international game.

Most people are familiar with personal challenges of making it through life, but, most do not understand getting past the one on one games people play.

I strongly suggest studying a human relations seminar book known as 'The Games People Play'.

This is a psychological study that includes direct interaction of audience participation. If you have not taken this course, see if it is available. Human nature is laid bare in all its finest through participation.

In this study, you will be required to look at the interactions between individuals, subdivisions of groups, and the complex of these entities that lead to larger influences.

Simply, a friend is someone who knows another persons faults and ignores them because of the enjoyment of that person's company.

This 'adage' is generally applied to group relations of subdivisions all the way to all levels of government on an international basis.

The age old dictum known as 'Balance of Powers' is the relationship between the thing called 'subdivisions' where agreements between people results in a stated 'division' we name as municipalities, counties, states, and countries.

The make up of these subdivisions can be only one of two formats, either religious or political. Any deviation from these two basics is considered a 'bastardization', no matter the way they are constructed.

In order to fully grasp what is involved, these have to be seen as a form of chess.

~ IF such and such happens, the situation causes changes to all facets of whatever level of field is being played on.

A great many lack the knowledge required to see any of this, and thus have no idea of the impacts affecting the whole.

Starting out, I will use basics most are aware of, at least according to the 'news'.

The two main divisions in America uses politics as its expression. In addition, there is the complex involving all that goes into this, emotion, religious belief, and the combined social/economical status. The latter are the enablers and drivers involved in formulating the discourse or protest position of for or against.

The 'hidden persuaders' are aimed directly at the target of involving a given group to take the action desired. Any form of dissatisfaction being broadcast is supposed to bring together emotion and result in direct action of using a 'subdivision' to suit an agenda's planned result. All protests use this in order to have innocent people take the desired action.

I do not say 'innocent people' lightly. The onset of what is known as 'Psychological Operations', is a causation driver most people are unaware of. This action uses a person's psychological makeup to drive actions they normally would not take. This causes acceptance of beliefs that are 'foreign' to a person and you were not raised that way, so to speak.

>I strongly suggest the reader study the above to the extent that it is understood in this basic format.

Hidden Persuaders deals with commercial ads and is applicable to today's political ads. This reveals how a picture, statement, or manner of presentation convinces you towards the objective.

You see it, etc.

Psychological Operations uses the hidden persuaders against yourself, by using your basic psychology against your better judgment. Very few think a simple protest should become a destructive and violent riot, but it has happened in the recent past.

Is someone thinking for you? Or, are you thinking for yourself?

Following this line of reasoning, who is being realistic?

Are the objections yours or something else?

IF you are not being 'subjugated' why protest?

Very few have the capacity to defend their own mind from things that are out of whack.

I used the term, 'Innocent People' for the simple reason that no one wants to be part of brain washing of 'dirty' politics, that makes them into an agenda's Manchurian Candidate.

Sure there are a lot of true needs, the question becomes, destroy everything or start fixing what is wrong, Chose.

Yes, this is a straight up God Father choice, nothing more, nothing less.

Each of us has a choice and a decision to make as to the difference between what we want and what we need.

Everyone hears about a combination of personal and public results we would like to see come to fruition. Make all of what you 'hear' a personal decision, then think of how to apply all this to a public setting. Yes, college debt is over the top, and I have yet to hear any students or a student body try to take care of this insidious problem. Is there no desire to help everyone, or what?

I am saying, 'Show Me'.

Prove that these protests are more than just noise.

Then there is the Kaleidoscope of 'Politics'.

Believe me when I say that every facet of everything is included in politics. But, which part do you consider critical?

Then in what way, and how might an individual have a realistic impact onto/into a stage of going public with ideas that just might make a difference?

This is simpler than it seems. All you need is to use that First Amendment guarantee of Freedom of Speech.

This is the great downfall of so called higher education.

Sure you will learn a great deal from classes, but, the reality of debate and talking to people who have differing ideas, is critical to a 'higher' learning.

I know of no other way to know how others think the way they do, or maybe even discover an answer that is not in any textbook. I am not saying anything more than as 'esoteric' (little known), as a simple word or phrase you haven't ever heard. This can be that Aha moment where that light bulb goes off and your realization explodes in the light of understanding.

Of the various forms of government, I suggest that eventually evolution will overtake mankind's need for government.

Understand that at first mankind will need to 'adjust' everything to fit a better situation than having any need of government.

In order to make this kind of revolutionary change, everyone will have to participate.

Start out finding leadership that is willing and able to change things slowly. Public panic is not what anyone needs, nor is that in any way desirable.

From the bottom up, a group can become a political subdivision, and directly affect local politics.

As the good of this becomes evident, it can move from a small area into the larger ones. A municipality can affect a county, and counties can affect a state.

How many are willing to spend years in such an effort? The reason I ask is that a true change will take years and putting a lot of skin in this game.

What is needed wherever you are? What needs changed to better help everyone?

An effective change includes all the 'things' that are not right, one at a time. Remember, the idea is not to freak out the general public, but have them agree to give the idea a try.

Who is inventive, an original thinker, and has the talent to pull this off?

The extraordinary promises being made recently, comes down to, can it be done without a second revolutionary war? Probably not, and these candidates will become targets along with all those who support the crazy ideas.

This leaves only one alternative, give the presidents party a majority in the house, and maybe add a couple of seats in the senate.

Several of the more mouthy are looking at losing their public offices, and a few more could easily be replaced.

To be clear, NO I don't like some of the way President Trump acts or does things. However, show me the better candidate.

There is some basis of both state and federal government, study it all so you will know.

The last on the candidates, do not trust any who specifically look to reduce or negate any Constitutional Rights, especially freedom of choice. These are not fit for public office.

That covers the basics of local and national politics.

Now for the international field.

Never take anything for granted as nothing is a given in this.

In the near future, the enforcement agencies will be cleaned out.

While that is taking place, those who have worked behind the scenes adverse to anyone's better interests, will find a very intense house cleaning for them and their agencies.

The State Department is to be hit hardest of all the agencies.

Individuals in it have committed crimes of treason and will be held accountable.

> Note that this is still dealing with our country. In order to set things right on the international stage, we have to be squeaky clean ourselves.

You see, America is one of, if not the biggest player on/in this international stage.

Therefore, getting 'things' done correctly for everyone is critical for us to lead.

Revamping the FBI comes first, followed by the CIA.

You might note that 'enforcement' duties have been shifting from the CIA to the FBI. This is over several years, but is accelerating today.

Add to that, that some of the running of intel has been put into the hands of very qualified military personnel, specifically The Marine Corp.

Our military is being cleaned of those opposed to the actions by our president.

As our house is cleaned up, the things put out by all these, is and has been, changing.

You will need to study The Balance of Powers, to understand it and how it is supposed to work.

The international stage in the balance of powers deals with all forms of relationships between 'States'. A 'state' is a country, look it up.

In the past few years a lot of the imbalances in treaties has been being addressed. Within this is the need to have 'private' conversations between leaders.

Remember the fun and games over that Ukraine call? Even though an edited transcript was offered, the resistance changed the wording of that to suit the get Trump agenda.

All these 'problems' will need to be fixed soon.

I expect a full transcript to be offered as evidence of no crime by Trump.

Following all this fun, several stages of resets of our government are to take place.

Expect many of the norms to be altered significantly.

This does not mean anyone needs to freak out, just think of betterment. There is a large amount of pure theater in everything you see, hear, and find out about. Within this theater is misdirection, falsehoods, and any kind of cover up imaginable. This is where reading between the lines becomes critical, mostly true of written material. What you have to do is get a 'feeling' of what is presented, in such a way that you sense the intent and purpose involved. This action will show true or false. From there it is taken into the reality of all the parameters possible according to the reality of the content or action, but only when it is true.

In many cases those involved do not want anything outed, so they simply create a totally false incident, known as pure theater. Nothing ever happened, but it looks and feels real, as far as any press presents it. The false presentments will appear blank, just like an unused piece of blank paper.

When someone does something that needs such scrutiny, comes out, those involved cringe. Most especially all those who hide in this way. I'm talking about the screaming nightmare cringe, at the lucid (reality) dreaming level, and in a few cases way beyond this.

These are groups of varying sizes and compositions, who individually have handlers giving orders.

There is a death oath taken to never out anyone, allow information that points at any member, and this is a global situation. There are a lot of rules within any given group, director, council, and actional pawns.

Hit squads can be regulars at the job, or randomly picked if they measure up to such a task. Irrespective of that, most groups and foundations have hit squads. These are used to protect either a foundation or business, and especially individuals directly and indirectly involved. Then there are the sleeper squads found in every country. Awakened only to perform a specific task, be that elimination or intimidation, think of The Men In Black, as one example.

The inter-relations between states includes but is not limited to everything that can go on between two (or more) countries. In many cases one state is requested to either convey a message, or take special action with a third state or party. This is very common, especially concerning influencing politics and elections.

Don't be fooled, every state tries to influence every other state for their own benefit or advancement. It is considered standard operating procedure globally.

The intricacies of this is so convoluted that only a very few understands it, or can know how it works, let alone the real target.

This is one reason I am writing this, to clear the air on what and how in the simplest format everyone can grasp.

Reading stated idea in an article and ferreting out the real meaning is a lot easier than grasping the intent, purpose, and details involved between states and their operatives.

Within this is an area most governments are working to discover. There are only a couple who are even going in the right direction, and they have a long way to go yet.

There are several things involved in what I do, that are considered conspiracy theorem or outright insane to even consider.

Being able to effectively look into events, past, present and future, can be overwhelming. However, I do so as part of my regular routine.

When a person knows too much, they get tested to see if they can and are willing not to out the critical information they know. The second part is that usually this person has the ability to recognize things that are not to be outed on their own. One slip of a small part can cause huge problems for everyone, war at all levels could take place, among other problems.

Therefore a person who gets involved in this has to be an adept.

As to involvements, every state is involved at one level or another.

In the recent past, several 'actions' have taken place, and the principles have been required to cease and desist. When a majority of states join together and tell another state, no, it is very real.

In all the variations of official beliefs, the main thing that stands out, is the willingness to become involved in this world stage to advance that specific state. The agenda comes from the beliefs of the people, as they accept whatever is taught as a pure belief. This is how a theocracy or a religious state comes into being and is run. In several states, the overwhelming belief of the people is the driver of the actions and attitudes propounded.

The basic problem with most governments is the governments attempts at controlling their people. The suppression in the average government is minor in comparison to a Theocracy, under which the punishments are extreme in relation to the crime committed. Instead of a lesser offense, and minor punishment, an average crime is raised to that of fighting against God. An Infidel has no chance of any reasonable punishment, but gets disfigurement or outright death. This is why what the US has today frightens so many zealot leaders, our Constitution and Laws covers most offenses. The punishments are much less severe, and any offense is covered. However, this is not nearly enough for some, and those who could prevent foreign law, refuse to do so. Sharia law and the stated enemy of America known as the Muslim beliefs, includes every American.

Involved in all this are the so called accidental and suicide deaths, as is the case with big pharma using their hit squads against any who have a better way or treatments with no side effects that work. Along with this are witnesses who die before being able to testify. All of this goes on so far that the full list would take hundreds of pages.

The whole of the human race is responsible for our present situation.

Whenever one goes along, the bad guys win. Most give a little of their virtue away each time good people do nothing.

Notice that the problems always belong to someone else. That an entity other than those who could address it, like a government should take care of it. Even when a small act might alter the lives of many through their example, most do nothing.

Do not expect a knight in shining armor to ride over a hill to save you, he ain't coming.

First a singular person takes an action. Then a few copy cat what they did. Within these two actions an activist can start a movement that feeds the homeless, gives medical care to those in need of it, and helps provide a home.

There are many ways to take care of all our problems, and I'm sure there are fine minds that can figure out how.

I can only stipulate one critical take on all this.

If it's to be...It is up to me.
